THIS IS THE STORY OF YOUR ANCESTRY

The attached pages are few in number, but the story itself would fill many volumes if one had the time and ability necessary to write a complete history of the Wilder family.

Back in 1878 the Reverend Moses H. Wilder published the Book of the Wilders and in 1902 Sidney and Gerald Wilder published a booklet of Joseph Wilder and his Descendants. It was these two books that provided the inspiration to elaborate and bring up to date the story of Nicholas Wilder and some of his descendants.

In compiling this pamphlet I made an attempt to insert enough genealogical data to show the continuity of the Wilder family, but refrained from the usual genealogy setup which may be found in the two books mentioned above as well as other books referred to in the pamphlet.

The story of the Wilders is an interesting one, but I am sure that you will find that the history of the families who married into the Wilder family equally interesting.

I regret that my endeavor to keep this contribution to our family history in a condensed form did not permit using all the information I obtained on the individual ancestors. I confined the story to the essence, but the reference books are replete with interesting accounts of your ancestors.

You will note that the Town of Hingham is the place where the Wilders first settled and the house that Jabez Wilder built in 1704 is still standing on Main Street. A Jacobean chest presented to Nazareth (Pitcher) Cushing as a wedding present in 1638 is still in existence and may be seen at the Peter Cushing house at 210 East Street when the Town of Hingham has its "open house" which in 1948 was on August 7th.

I wish to express my appreciation to the New England Historic Genealogical Society and the Boston Public Library for the excellent facilities which these institutions have provided for genealogical research. My thanks, likewise to my sister. Mrs. William Janes (Elizabeth Manning) for her kindness in typing and reproducing this pamphlet.

MARY BRIDGES

Mary Bridges was probably born in Hingham about 1766 and died in Pembroke in 1801. She married Theophilus Wilder of Hingham and their first child, Theophilus, was born April 6, 1786. In all probability, she was related to Joseph Bridges who was one of the early settlers of Pembroke, Maine.

MEHITABLE CRANE

Mehitable Crane, daughter of John and Mary (Wheeler) Crane was born in Trescott, Maine, June 13, 1797, died July 20, 1866. She married Joseph Wilder of Pembroke, December 9, 1821.

Her ancestor was Henry Crane who was born in England about 1621 and was in Dorchester before 1654. The line of descent is as follows:

(1) Henry Crane (1621-1709) m. (1) Tabitha Kinsley who died 1681 (2) Elizabeth

(2) Ebenezer Crane (1665-___) m. Mary Tolman (1671-___)whose grandfather Thomas Tolman, Senior came to Dorchester in 1635. Ebenezer Crane served in Sir William Phip's expedition to Canada in 1690.

(3) Abijah Crane (1714-___) m. (1) Sarah Field who died in 1742
(2) Sarah Beverley

(4) John Crane (1744-1805) m. Mehitable Wheeler

John Crane was one of the "Indians" of the Boston Tea Party and later was very active in the War of the Revolution as colonel of the 3rd Continental Artillery. He served under Generals Knox and Gates and fought in the battles of Monmouth, Brandywine, Germantown and Red Bank and was wounded at the battle of Brooklyn in 1776. In 1783, he was commisioned brigadier general for active and meritorious service. He was considered the most expert artillerist on the American side. Governor Hancock appointed him the first Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Washington County in 1790.

CAPTAIN CHASE JOSEPH BRYANT

Chase Joseph Bryant was born in Cutler, Maine, May 9, 1824 and died May 14, 1858. He married Elmira Wilder, Sept. 30, 1847. He was the son of Henry and Sarah (MacDonald) Bryant.

The ancestry of Chase Joseph Bryant is believed, by this compiler, to go back to Stephen Bryant who was in Plymouth Colony as early as 1632. Stephen Bryant was the ancestor of William Cullen Bryant, famous American poet.

The Bryant genealogy is as follows:

1. Stephen Bryant married Abigail Shaw
2. John, born in Plymouth 1650 m. Sarah _____
3. John, born in Plymouth in 1678 m. Mary _____
4. John, died in 1757, m. Elizabeth _____
5. Bartholomew, born in Scarborough, Maine, July 11, 1737, married Ellen Brookins of Scarborough. Children: Joseph, Thomas, Samuel, Stephen, Patience, Martha, Hannah, Rebecca, Lydia and Sarah. Bartholomew helped found the Town of Machias.

Reference--Genealogy and History of Maine by Little
N. E. Hist. & Gen. Register Vol 24

Due to the fact that the Town of Cutler was first settled by inhabitants of the Town of Machias, it is a strong presumption that Henry Bryant, the father of Chase Bryant was the grandson or great grandson of Bartholomew. This compiler endeavored to have this presumption confirmed but was unable to obtain any further information as the Town of Culter's records were destroyed by fire in 1900.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF GENERAL JOHN CRANE
(1744 - 1805)

A Revolutionary soldier. Was born at Braintree, Mass., Dec. 7, 1744, the son of Abijah Crane and Sarah Beverly. At the time of the French and Indian War, although only fifteen years of age, he offered to serve in place of his father who had been drafted by the Massachusetts Provincial Government, and was in poor health. On his return from the war, he learned the trade of housewright. About 1762, he helped to set out a famous row of elm trees (Paddock Elms) opposite the Granary Burying-ground, Boston. In 1767 he married Mehitable Wheeler and with his brother purchased a house and shop on what is now Tremont Street near Hollis. In the years following the passage of the Stamp Act, Crane was identified with the Sons of Liberty. At his shop some of the men who staged the Boston Tea Party disguised themselves as Indians and set out for Griffins Wharf, Crane among them. As he was down in the hold of one of the ships, a chest of tea fell upon him and knocked him senseless. His companions, believing him dead, concealed him under a heap of shavings in a nearby carpenter's shop but thanks to a sturdy constitution, he recovered.

In 1774, owing to the paralysis of trade produced by the Boston Port Bill, he moved to Providence. He had already acquired some knowledge of gunnery and when as a resident of Boston, he joined a train of artillery composed of mechanics and commanded by Maj. Adino Paddock. On the arrival of news of the Battle of Lexington, he was made captain of the train attached to the Rhode Island "army of observation". Marching to Boston, he joined Gridley's regiment of artillery and thenceforth saw almost continuous service.

During the siege of Boston, he was in charge of a breastwork on the Neck and on July 8, 1775, attacked and routed a British advance post. He also participated in several skirmishes on islands in the Harbor. On Dec. 10, 1775, he was commissioned Major in Knox's regiment of artillery and later accompanied the army to New York.

He was disabled for a time by a wound in the foot received Sept. 14, 1776 at Corlear's Hook while he was bombarding a British man-of-war. On January, 1777, he was commissioned Colonel and proceeded to raise a regiment in Massachusetts, the 3rd Continental Artillery. Detachments of it were present under Sullivan in the Rhode Island campaign where Crane's services evoked honorable mention in the dispatches, under Gates at Saratoga, and in the defence of Red Bank. On Sept. 30, 1783, Crane was brevetted Brigadier General.

After the war, he went into the lumber business on Passamaquoddy Bay but the venture not proving successful he removed to Whiting, Maine, where he had been given a grant of 200 acres for his military service by the Legislature of Massachusetts. He was appointed Judge of the Court of Common Pleas by Gov. Hancock in 1790. He died August 21, 1805, highly respected by his comrades in arms, for his energy, courage and coolness in the presence of danger.

(There is a manuscript memoir of John Crane by a descendant, George H. Allan, in the library of the New England & Geneal. Society, Boston. Authentic sketches of him are in F. S. Drake's Tea Leaves (1884) and Albert Crane's "Henry Crane of Milton, Mass. (1893)". Reference to his services will be found in Mass. Soldiers and Sailors of the Revolutionary War (1896-1898)
